SAIL BOAT CAPSIZES IN BAY

Two Men Saved From Drowning

ONE DIES LATER FROM EXPOSURE

Two men were saved from drowning in the bay near the salt works Sunday evening after having been in the water for several hours after a sail boat in which they were riding was capsized by a sudden gust of wind. One of the men, however, passed away three days later as a result of his long exposure in the cold waters of the bay.

The men are Martin O'Hara, 36, and Peter McCaffery, 50, employees of the Alaska Codfish Co. at its plant here.

Joseph Penna of this city, an employee of the salt company, heard cries of help from the bay near the salt works, and was unable to see the upturned boat some distance from shore. He notified the police department. Officers Mengels and Genochio hurried to the scene and Officer Douglass went to the fire house, where he obtained a rope. The sheriff's office was also notified and Deputy Sheriffs Lerrecou and Mora responded.

The policemen secured a launch in which they endeavored to reach the two men, but owing to the fact that the launch had no rudder they were unable to reach the capsized boat. Penna then jumped into the water and managed after a struggle to drag the boat after him to place where the men could be taken into the launch.

The two men were taken in the police car to the Redwood City hospital, where they were given treatment. Both were almost exhausted and suffering with cold and exposure. The younger man recovered without any ill effects, but McCaffery passed away on Wednesday.

An inquest was held yesterday at the James Crowe Company's parlors by Coroner W. A. Brooke. It was found that McCaffery had come to his death from pneumonia caused by the long exposure in the water. No relatives of the deceased are known. No funeral arrangements have been made.

JOINT CELEBRATION TO BE HELD BY TWO LOCAL TOWNS

Big Time Planned At San Carlos Fair

Fire sirens will blast a welcome to many guests who will gather at San Carlos Saturday evening for the opening of the joint celebration of Belmont, San Carlos and Port San Francisco, known as La Fiesta de Santa Belposa. The merry-making will continue Saturday evening and will be resumed Sunday afternoon when the fire departments of San Carlos and Belmont will meet in a water fight.

Citizens of the three towns are busy this week preparing to receive visitors from all sections of the Peninsula. It is hoped that the Fiesta will become an annual fair. This initial carnival comes in celebration of the completion of a great street improvement program in San Carlos involving nearly one million dollars.

Flames from a huge bon-fire to be ignited at seven o'clock Saturday evening will greet the visitors and open the barbecue. Concessions put on entirely by local organizations will provide amusement for the throngs. Ten o'clock will bring the coronation of the Queen of the Fiesta which will be followed immediately by the pageant, "Sanca Belposa," an allegory involving the three towns as typified in the title. Arrangements are being made to make the pageant a spectacle of color through gorgeous lighting effects.

Sunday morning will be devoted to games and other sports. At two o'clock the fire departments of Belmont and San Carlos will try their prowess at the ends of two fire hoses under full pressure

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Locker and daughter Eva Locker and Fred G. Taylor made up a motor party to the Yosemite valley over the week end.

Naturalization Is Valid for Cortesi

JUDGE REFUSES TO SET ASIDE ORDER OF NATURALIZATION

Oliver Cortesi, who was admitted to citizenship in this country on April 7, 1926, is legally a citizen of this country, according to a ruling of Judge George H. Buck filed yesterday. The U. S. district naturalization director had petitioned the court to set aside the order admitting Cortesi to citizenship on the ground that fraud had been employed in securing the order.

It was claimed that he had misrepresented when asked if he had ever been arrested for violation of the Wright Act. In denying the petition of the naturalization officer Judge Buck said:

"Had I the least suspicion that he had at the time of his naturalization testified falsely or tried to evade any question asked of him I should not hesitate to vacate the order of this Court admitting him to citizenship. At the time of the hearing herein on April 7, 1926, it was made to appear that he had been arrested in Justice of the Peace Johnson's Court at Daly City but was discharged. So that matter should not at this time be considered. It was disposed of at the time of the hearing of his petition for naturalization. The only other matter is the question of his purported arrest for violation of the Wright Act at South San Francisco, this county. No complaint was filed—no warrant of arrest was issued—no arrest was made—no trial was had and he testified at the hearing on April 27, 1926, that he was not arrested and the evidence shows that to be true. It is suggested that he had a motive to conceal the facts of this matter. Admitting that to be the fact his two witnesses at that hearing, Chief of Police Beloni and Justice of the Peace Edward Farrell, had no motive and they failed to remember about this matter. It seems that the Chief of Police told many of the citizens of that place, conducting soft drink places, to go before the Recorder and pay a fine of $25.00 and Cortesi was one of those so informed by the Chief of police and he went before the Recorder anl paid a fine of $25. Cortesi says he did not know what the payment was for but thought it was for a license. His two witnesses, two of our best citizens, forgot all about it. While this whole matter is somewhat clouded I see no false testimony that would warrant me in vacating the order admitting Cortesi to citizenship and hence the order made, will stand."

VICE CONDITIONS EXIST IN COUNTY

SALE OF ILLICIT LIQUOR CHARGED BY SWART

That vice conditions are bad in the county and that many resorts are selling liquor and are running without permits from the county was the charge made by District Attorney Swart before the board of supervisors Monday. Swart claims that conditions are such in the county that his office alone cannot cope with them. If law is to be enforced, he said, he must have the co-operation of other departments.

The burden of running down law violators should not rest on the district attorney, Swart stated. This is the function of the police the district attorney averred, not of the legal department of the government. In the past Swart, said he had hired special detectives, but there he was handicapped by the lack of suitable men for the work.

The last legislature, he said, had allowed four extra deputies for the sheriff's office. This office, he stated, should work on law enforcement as well as the constables of the various townships. Placing the duty of chasing out the violators would relieve the district attorney's office and allow more time for other legal work of the county.

Swart also criticised the proceedure of some of the courts, stating that the fines levied upon convicted bootleggers did not even pay for the expense of convicting them. The ordinance requiring that all sellers of soft drinks be licensed was praised by the district attorney. It was, he stated, a big help in keeping down the sale of illegal liquor.

Finally Swart urged a closer co-operation between all branches of the county government in the reduction of illicit liquar sales and the detection of establishments where such liquors are sold

CAR FOUND WRECKED IN RAVINE

The finding of a wrecked machine stained with blood at the bottom of a deep ravine below the Alpine road, near La Honda Tuesday by a group of hunters formed the basis of a mystery which Captain Jimmy Logan and his traffic squad have since been trying to solve. The blood stains were in the driver's compartment, but no trace of the driver of the wrecked machine had been located yesterday.

Pinned to the car was a note, "Please do not bother the parts of this car, as I will be back to remove them. I have gone for help." From the rusted condition of the car, it is estimated that it had been where it was found for more than a week, perhaps several weeks.

The note was written on the back of an envelope addressed to Mrs. Ines Gonzales, Box 134, Pescadero, and bore the signature of J. S. Hester of Stockton. The return address on the envelope was that of Mrs. Jean McDonald of Sunnyvale. The car was registered in the name of Hester.

A call was made to the Pescadero postoffice, but no information could be secured concerning Mrs. Gonzales, who is unknown in the town where it is supposed she must have lived at one time.

A searching party was organized to thoroughly search the bushes around the car in the belief that Hester might have been injured, and had been unable to reach the road and summon help, but had perished near the scene of the wreck.

Captain Logan notified the Stockton police, and was awaiting a reply from that city yesterday regarding the identity of the owner of the car.

WORKMAN IS OVERCOME BY PLANT FUMES

Firemen Save Life Of Redwood Man

Another life can be credited to the efficacy of the inhalator of the fire department. J. Pospado, a workman at the plant of the Peninsula Paving Co., who was found unsconcious at the plant of that company on the Middlefield road after breathing fumes from a gasoline engine, was brought back to consciousness after apparently all signs of life had left him.

Pospado was working in a pit with an engine. The pit became filled with poisonous fumes from the exhaust, and feeling himself being overcome by the gases, Pospado tried to leave the pit. He managed to get out, but fell unconscious at the edge of the pit. Here he was found sometime later by other workmen at the plant.

Dr. Clattenburg was summoned, and he rushed the unconscious man to the firehouse, where the inhalator was used. After about twenty minutes of artificial respiration consciousness returned, and Pospado was apparently none the worse for his narrow escape.

LOCAL MERCHANTS VICTIMIZED BY BAD CHECK ARTIST

WOMAN ARRESTED HERE ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

Five local business houses were victimized by a woman passer of bad checks Saturday. In the fifth establishment, however, she was apprehended and placed under arrest by Chief of Police Collins. The woman, Mrs. Anna Westbrook gave checks of $40 each at Ryan's electric store, Hull Bros hardware and Skagg's grocery. At the Sequoia Pharmacy she passed a check for $24. In each case she purchased a small order of goods and gave the large check, receiving the change in cash.

The transaction appeared odd to Mark Ryan of the electric store and he notified the police. A search was made of the stores on Main street and Broadway, and the woman was found just leaving the Marcus department store, where she had just passed another $40 check.

The woman was booked at the jail, but was later removed to the Community hospital, when it became known that she was an expectant mother. Dr. Herbert Clattenburg was called upon to attend her, and advised her removal to the hispital.

Mrs. Westbrook stated to the police that the checks were given to her by her husband in San Francisco. Westbrook is being sought by the police..

PROCEEDINGS HELD IRREGULAR; JUDGE HUDNER DECREES

The town of Belmont, incorporated October 18, 1926, by an election in which the incorporationists carried the day by a small margin and only after a lengthy legal battle is once more a thing of the past. By a decision of Judge Jno. L. Hudner, sitting in the court of Judge Buck, the town is declared disincorporated.

The court decision is the result of a suit filed on March 24 of this year, entitled John W. Bourdette vs Harry C. Warren, C. L. Jordan, Columbus J. Messner, Lewis C. Vannier and Thomas Pennington, as trustees, D. W. Callen, as clerk, and S. J. Cook, as treasurer, of the town. Bourdette alleged in his complaint that the inclusion of his property invalidated the incorporation of the town since acreage land can only be included by the consent of the owners. The Bourdette land was acreage and he had opposed its inclusion in the incorporated area. These contentions were borne out by the testimony, and upheld by the court.

Judge Hudner was reluctant to disincorporate the city, and has tried for months to arrive at some solution of the problem. None could be found, however, satisfactory to the parties concerned. The decision of the court follows:

The court cannot escape the conclusion that the inclusion of relator's land renders abortive the incorporation of Belmont; and it is of opinion also that the petition for incorporation was defective by reason of non-compliance with the requirement of the statute that the signers give the dates of their signing.

Neither is it certain that the supervisors should not have ordered another (final) hearing after some corrections made in the petition.

The court naturally, as heretofore declared, has been reluctant to reach this result, and hoped when it ordered re-argument on the point that a way would be found to exclude relator's land and let the incorporation stand, but none of the parties seemed, or was agreeable to that arrangement, thus requiring the decision made.

JNO. L. HUDNER,
Judge.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

More than 220,000 motorists from other states and foreign lands visited California last year, according to the California State Automobile Association which welcomes incoming motor tourists at its twenty-seven offices with maps, touring data and necessary permits. The travel tide this year is reported as much greater.

San Francisco's building activities have shown a steady increase during 1927, a monthly report issued last week by the Bureau of Building Inspection shows. A total of 848 permits issued last month for buildings estimated to $3,609,611, as against 723 permits in July for buildings costing $3,560,314. In August, 1926, a total of 862 permits were issued for structures estimated at $4,163,510.

Exceeding every monthly total of 1927 and bearing positive proof that Los Angeles is heading for one of the greatest seasons of construction in its history, city building permits valuations for August reached $11,790,916, according to the city building department tabulation.

Nearly a million dollars a year is spent in California in controlling rodent pests and approximately $100,000 in the poisoning and trapping of predatory animals, according to Paul G. Reddington, chief of the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. "Predatory animals," said Mr. Reddington, "take a heavy toll of agricultural and livestock products annually, and are also a menace to beneficial wild life. This is especially true of lions, coyotes and bobcats."

A new dormitory for women, costing between $250,000 and $350,000 and housing 125 students, will soon grace the University of California campus at Berkeley, the gift of Mrs. Philip Ernest Bowles. Announcement of the gift was made last week by President W. W. Campbell. The building will be a memorial to the late Philip Ernest Bowles, university regent and a financial pioneer of California.

The old West is gone forever, and even the cattle rustlers of these modern days have given up cow ponies for limousines. Sheriff Ellis Jones of Sacramento county was last week requested to be on the lookout for a band of 1927 cattle rustlers alleged to have raided a Yuba county stock ranch last week. The "rustlers" were reported to have fled in a large sedan after herding six young calves into the tonneau of the vehicle.

Another long-distance marathon race is in the offing. This one is set for New Year's Day, and will be from Capitola to Monterey, a distance of 22 miles. The Capitola Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the event, believes that the $25,000 prize will lure the greatest aquatic stars in the world. Entry blanks will be available next month.

A $132,000 building—the largest of its kind in the country—in which will be housed all the college publications of the University of California, is the dream of the executive committee of the Associated Students of the university. This was disclosed last week when the committee approved in principle a plan to build such a building. Under the plan being worked out, the new building would provide a home for the "Daily Californian," the "Blue and Gold," the "Countryman," the "Engineer," the "Commercia," and the "Literary Review."

In the annual struggle among directors of the various fairs to obtain something new with which to attract and entertain visitors, the heads of the Southern California fair, to be held at Riverside September 27 to October 2, have this year added an aviation division. Stunt flying will not be featured, but all models of planes from the tiny air speedster to the giant three motored passenger-carrying ships will be on display. The agricultural and live-stock departments, which have always been the back bone of the Southern fair, have not been neglected. Anticipating larger exhibits, additional space has been provided.

San Francisco is now enlisted in the ranks of the cities with traffic rules in conformity with the code which is being generally adopted throughout California. In adopting the recommendations of the San Francisco Traffic Survey Committee last week for a new system of traffic control in the city, the Board of Supervisors took action which gives a definite impetus to the movement for standardization of city traffic rules throughout the state. The legislation adopted embodies all main features of the uniform traffic ordinance for California cities sponsored by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California with only such changes as were necessary to meet street conditions peculiar to San Francisco.

Of 14,985 felony charges preferred in California during the last two fiscal years, only 694 terminated in acquittals, Governor Young was advised last week in a report submitted by Attorney General U. S. Webb.

Neither time, effort or money is being spared to make the sixth Los Angeles county fair, at Pomona, September 20 and 24, an outstanding success in every department. Several features have been added, that are somewhat in the nature of a surprise, and which no doubt will prove a delight to the thousands of visitors who will attend the exposition this year.

California's new three-day marriage license law was termed a complete failure last week by County Clerk Harry I. Mulcrevy of San Francisco. The measure had been in effect just a month to the day and Mulcrevy described it as "impractical and the cause of inconvenience to all concerned."

Fair and sunny weather over all California during September, with only slight cloudiness and a few thunderstorms in the mountains are predicted by Father Ricard, Santa Clara University's "padre of the rains."

Foreign corporations doing intrastate business in California, who wish to go out of business here, need no longer file a notice of their intention with the secretary of state, Attorney General U. S. Webb has just opined.

The third of the amendments to the California Vehicle Act affecting operators' licenses is that which treats with reckless driving, recognized as one of the most serious offenses in motor vehicle operation. Formerly, three convictions for speeding within a year constituted automatic revocation of the operator's license. The law has been amended to provide that the Division shall forthwith revoke the license of any person convicted upon three charges of reckless driving within a period of 12 months from the time of the first conviction.

The new thirty-story Russ building on Montgomery street, between Pine and Bush streets, San Francisco, is now completed and is being occupied by tenants. The Russ structure is the tallest building in San Francisco and the largest office structure on the Pacific Coast. In the building of the giant structure, which affords an unsurpassed view of the bay and the Pacific Ocean on clear days, 22,000 yards of concrete, 9,000 tons of structural steel and 1,500 tons of reinforcing steel were used.

M. E. Armstrong, building inspector, in making a survey of the buildings in Redlands now under way and to be started before the end of the year finds the following buildings being completed; Mutual Orange Distributors, $50,000; Physicians' Building, $30,000; school buildings, $200,000; Y.M.C.A., $150,000; university chapel, $200,000; university hospital, $20,000. Buildings to be started soon are West Coast Theater, $400,000; community hospital, $200,000; high-school auditorium, $200,000; Edison warehouse, $40,000

California's three-day "cooling off" period before the granting of a marriage license apparently prevented at least 60 couples from getting married during its first full month of operation, a report of Recorder Edmond Godchaux indicated last week. During August a total of 591 marriage certificates were recorded in San Francisco as against 652 during the same month a year ago. Papers filed during the month showed a substantial increase over those in August a year ago, with 6,507 as against 6,008. The recorder's office shows a net gain of $737.20 in fees for the month with $11,375.35 taken in this year as against $10,639.15 in August, 1926.

For the week immediately following the Santa Ana Fair, which was held September 5 to 10, four of the most important expositions of the September season are scheduled. The Stanislaus county fair at Modesto opens on September 12 and ends on the 17th; the Kern county fair at Bakersfield is scheduled for September 13 to 17; the big Ventura county fair at Ventura will run for five full days from September 14 to 18, and the San Diego Farm Bureau fair will run on the same dates as Ventura. Wonderful displays of community products and entertainment features galore are announced for each of these events.

"Whenever there is a child within a marked crosswalk on your side of the street, you are required to permit this child to pass in front of your machine before you may proceed over the crossager of the public safety department walk," states D. V. Nicholson, manof the California State Automobile Association. "And this rule applies when either adults or children are in the crosswalk. At unmarked crosswalks the motorist's duty is the same as at those marked, if the pedestrian raises his hand to indicate his intention to claim his right to cross. Also, it is unlawful to pass a machine at a crosswalk which has stopped to permit a person to cross in front of it."

Enactment of a State law compelling every transpacific aviator to carry a sea gull with a container for messages attached to its leg was recommended to Governor C. C. Young last week by Louis Jacobs of San Jose. Declaring his unusual proposal would prevent "ocean suicides," the San Jose man urged legislation on the theory that whenever an airplane fell into the Pacific the sea gull would fly back to the mainland with a message showing exactly where the forced landing took place.

Announcing preliminary plans for the licensing of approximately 18,000 barbers, the State Board of Barber Examiners last week served notice that all California tonsorial artists will have to get their pictures taken. Applications, accompanied by photographs for the State files, will automatically win licenses for some 17,000 barbers who have been practicing for two years or more and who have lived in California for at least one year. The fee will be $2. Applicants who do not fall in this category must pay $10 for a State examination as to qualifications, it was announced, and $2 for a license. Barber apprentices will be examined for $5 and licensed for $1. The board will have application blanks ready by September 10 and all applications must be filed by October 28.

With a scheduled program and prospects of attendance potentially outrivaling the recent national convention in Seattle, the twenty-third annual convention of the California Real Estate Association slated October 10 to 14 at Santa Monica, will open for the first time in a number of years with the unified support of every real estate board in California.

California motorists contributed a total of $6,913,700 in automobile license fees last year. The major portion of which went toward maintenance and repair of state and county highways.

Santa Rosa will be the scene of the annual meeting of the Redwood Empire Association and affiliated units on October 7. Following the convention, participants will organize the Redwood Empire caravan for a tour of which the itinerary is to be announced later.

San Ffancisco will witness one of its most colorful events on September 16 when more than 100,000 citizens are expected to gather in the Civic Center to acclaim Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, conqueror of the Atlantic, according to plans which have received final sanction.

FARMER WOMAN IN OKLAHOMA

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Because It Gave Her Health and Strength

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a houseful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid.

This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 387, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Housing Conditions of New York's Poor Bad

With the general increase of luxurious apartment houses for the wealthy the New York city health department is endeavoring to bring before the public the fact that housing conditions in certain parts of the lower and extreme upper East side have not kept pace with the sanitary progress of the rest of the city. The infant mortality and general mortality rates and the tuberculosis rate of these parts is considerably higher than the rates for the city as a whole. Field nurses from the department have recently completed a house-to-house survey of these districts. The conditions disclosed Louis I. Harris, health commissioner, describes as menacing and intolerable. Bedrooms are crowded and badly ventilated. Many families live in basements. Scattered throughout the sections are factory buildings which the commissioner regards as having a definite influence upon the health of the children. Doctor Harris hopes to arouse the city to the need of remedial measures.

Felt Better

Before he became famous as the constructor of serials, William Lord Wright was a newspaper man and at one time edited a country paper where the rival editor was most annoying. This man had the habit of stopping his press to insert some bit of last-minute news. Hardly a day went by that didn't show on the front page an article starting: "We stop the press to announce."

Finally it got on Bill's nerves, and one day his own front page bore the fated legend: "We stop the press to announce that there is nothing of sufficient importance to justify the stopping of the press. Giddap!"—Los Angeles Times.

An Unnecessary Danger

ON a former occasion we advocated in this column the placing of an electric siren on the silent policeman at the corner of Broadway and the highway to be blown every time the fire truck is called upon to cross this crowded roadway. The idea seems to have been favorably received from the comment we have heard. The fact remains, however, that the menace has not been removed.

When the highway is crowded it is almost impossible to hear the siren on the trucks because of the traffic noise close at hand. The erection of the arterial stop signs at every corner also makes highway traffic less apprehensive of cross streets. It is, therefore, a danger to the highway tourist and to the driver of the fire truck to have this important corner unprotected.

Eventually a firehouse will be built on the west side of the highway, and this will practically avoid the necessity of crossing this roadway, but as long as the truck is to be frequently called across the highway, we believe that the small expense of installing a warning signal at this point would more than pay for itself in increased safety to life and to the city's equipment.

The State Fair

THOSE who enjoyed an opportunity to view the San Mateo county booth at the state fair have nothing but praise for Horticultural Commissioner Tate and his capable wife for the manner in which the beauties and products of the county were displayed to the thousands who viewed the fair. The booth was artistic, well arranged, and for a county whose products are rather limited as compared to those of some of the interior districts, there was a very creditable showing of fruit and vegetables. And, of course, the flowers were among the best at the fair.

A booth such as San Mateo county had at the fair, is we believe, an excellent form of advertising for the county, and is well worth the money expended. Money, however, would not of itself be sufficient were it not for the pride taken in the county exhibit by Mr. and Mrs. Tate and their thorough understanding of its resources and products.

The fair, as a whole, was an unqualified success. The county exhibits were all good, and representative of the various sections of the state. Each year sees a larger and larger attendance at the fair, and more interest expressed in the various lines represented. The board of supervisors does well to appropriate funds for a county display, and will, we hope see their way to do so in the future.

Don'ts For Safety

AS winter approaches and the need for fires in the home increases there is a consequent increase in fire hazard. For this reason a special List of "don'ts" for the fall season has been issued by the industrial news bureau. This we pass on to our readers as follows:

Promote fire prevention and protect your property and family.

Last year over $1,000 worth of property was burned every minute and a life was lost every 35 minutes.

Clean property seldoms burns—do away with rubbish and junk.

Careless smokers burned $30,000,000 worth of property last year.

Keep matches in metal boxes where children cannot reach them.

Don't keep ashes in wooden boxes or deposit them against wooden buildings or partitions.

Don't change your electric wiring without consulting a competent electrician.

Don't hang electric light cords on nails.

Use metal protection under all stoves and protect woodwork where stoves or furnaces are close to walls.

Don't pass stove pipes through ceiling, roofs, or wooden partitions.

Have all flues cleaned, examined and repaired at least once a year.

Every open fireplace should have a screen.

Don't connect gas stoves, heaters or hot plates with rubber hose.

Don't use gasoline or benzine to cleanse clothing near an open flame, light or fire. Use noninflammable cleaner.

Don't use kerosene, benzine or naptha in lighting fires or to quicken a slow fire.

Don't use liquid polishes near open lights. Many such compounds contain volatile inflammable oils.

Don't go into closets with lighted matches or candles.

Remember that there is always danger in the discarded cigarette and cigar stub.

By Esto Broughton

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 14—"I do not choose to run' 'does not appear to be as popular in California as it was in the Black Hills, ot least senatorially speaking.

With the United States Senatorial compaign a year off the political horses, dark and light, do not seem to be inclined to imitate the resident of the nation in any advance declinations.

California's many candidates are not taking any chances with the New England slogan whether it means, "I'm bashful, I do not seek, but I will accept;" or merely a polite "no."

There will be no mistakes about intentions out here in this golden state as to when a declination is a declination, for there are no hints that could be interpreted by the most sanguine as a refusal.

While the farmers were trying out their fine stock in the State Fair contests during the last week, two of the leading candidates were trying their respective charms on the fair visitors.

Ex-Governor Friend W. Richardson "did" the Fair according to his custom, greeting country editors, gossiping with political cronies, and admiring the livestock.

While entertaining his confreres with accounts of the magicians tricks of India, the system of Paris and the cheeses of Amsterdam, observed on his recent round-the-world trip, "Friend" never ceased bending his ear to the ground "trying the political earth if it be in tune."

While Richardson has not yet announced his candidacy for the senatorship, it was an open secret during the four years that he was Governor that the executive hoped to round out his public career with the Washington toga. And after six months globe-trotting Richardson has returned in his best running trim and is ready for the first electioneering hurdles.

But "Friend" will not have a "walk-away" for senatorial honors with Senotor Hiram Johnson, the encumbent, in fine fettle and ready for the fray.

"Hiram" also was a Fair visitor and the special guest of Governor C. C. Young, being received with great enthusiasm by his old political friends and companions.

Johnson is preparing to return to the Senate upon the tide of the need of the Colorado river project. The Swing-Johnson bill providing for the high line dam at Boulder Canyon, which will furnish both water and power not only for Imperial Valley but also for all the southland, is his "pet hobby" and meets a responsive chord in the hearts of the "dry" farmers.

Undoubtedly Johnson will have the backing of the progressive Young wing, and he may have the neutral support of his fellow solon, Senator Samuel Shortridge, according to rumor. Gossip has it that Shortridge, with whom he has been at "political swords points" has offered to "lay off" in return for Johnson not opposing the candidacy of Herbert Hoover for president of the United States.

California is likely to have a new contender for solonic laurels in the person of its flying Lieutenant-Governor and war hero, Buron Fitts. The new generation of voters, refusing to be bound by political precedents, are rallying around the young World war veteran and urging him to run, according to reliable reports at the capitol.

Rex Goodcell of Los Angeles, candidate for governor at the last election and a popular runner up in the southern part of the state, has already announced himself for the United States senatorship, being the first avowed aspirant.

Major Walter K. Tuller is another Los Angelean, who is much discussed for the senatorial race. As chairman of the state crime commission he come some popularity on his program of increasing criminal penalties all along the line.

The drys will still have to be reckoned with in the program of Congressman Walter F. Lineberger, the driest of dry candidates, who is expected to be entered in the Washington race by the Anti-Saloon League.

Special to the Times-Gazette

Governor Young has an affinity! The lady in question is none other than Queen Isabelle.

And the "other man" in the case is Columbus, who sits at the queen's feet in the rotunda of the Capitol, ready to receive the pearls to finance his voyage to America.

With the completion of the new Capitol annex buildings, someone suggested that Queen Isabella and Columbus be moved from the main statehouse to one of the new buildings. But Governor Young said "No."

"I like to have the Queen near me," explained the governor "She's an inspiration."

A Voice Over The Telephone

Here is something we often forget, told in meter by a stray verse. On the telephone the "smile" registers as readily as face to face, even if unseen.

A voice across the telephone
Can make or mar the day.
Be careful of the tone you use,
And think of what you say.
Your pleasant smile may not be seen,
Or known your kindly heart,
For people at the telephone
Are often miles apart.
Then sow a "smile" and reap a "smile"
And in the end you'll find
That nothing pays more interest
Than the art of being kind.

HARKNESS ORCHESTRA AT SEQUOIA

Eddie Harkness and his Victor Recording Orchestra, which play nightly at the Hotel Mark Hopkins, San Francisco, will appear on the stage at the Sequoia theatre tonight at both shows.

Harkness and his orchestra need no introduction as they are the most popular radio orchestra on the Pacific coast.

They are known throughout the country having formerly played at the Palace and St. Francis hotels in San Francisco before leaving to open the Olympic hotel in Seattle. After two years there, Harkness and his orchestra were brought back to San Francisco to open the Hotel Mark Hopkins, and have been the big attraction at that hotel since its opening last December.

They have been broadcasting from Hotel Mark Hopkins through KFRC and proved to be one of the main attractions. They have been heard far out into the Pacific, even as far as New Zealand.

Each member of the orchestra is a soloist, and during their presentation dances and songs will be introduced.

KEEP YOUR TIRES PROPERLY INFLATED

Do not run the regular cord or high pressure tire under-inflated to get balloon tire results, advises the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. The working of fabric will crack the side walls and separate the cord layers from the rubber that holds them together. Friction between the cords will cause blow-outs.

DESERTED CEMETERY RECALLS EARLY DAYS

By D. E. O'KEEFE

Father C. E. Kennedy, W. J. Murray and the writer recently visited the scene of the old St. Denis church located just off the Sand Hill road about a mile from the defunct town of Searsville. Cattle roam at will over the place that was once the scene of large gatherings where worshippers came on horseback from the mills and surrounding country to attend mass in the little church nestling in the sunlight just at the base of the Santa Morena mountains. The large oak that sheltered the edifice is still standing, mute evidence of the scenes of other days. Under this monarch of the forest the church was erected by the generosity of the late Denis Martin, who came with an ox team over the plains in 1844 to make his fortune in the wild and woolly west.

Martin was a quaint character. In the days of his prosperity he did not forget the faith of his father, nor the religion taught him by his mother, so he erected a church in which the people might worship. The edifice was named after Martin's patron saint, Saint Denis of France. It was the first church opened in the county. The doors were thrown open in 1858. The dedicatory ceremonies were in charge of the fathers of Santa Clara Mission or rather the Jesuit priests of Santa Clara university. For some years after a priest would walk from the mission over El Camino Real to the Sand Hill road to the church. Arriving on Saturday evening, the devoted priest would wrap his cloak about him and sleep near the altar. After mass next morning he would take his meal at the home of the late John Murray, near by, and along in the afternoon trudge his weary way home on the dusty road to the mission. The worshippers were served in this manner for many years until the latter sixties when the late lamented Father Dempsey of San Mateo was placed in charge by Archbishop Alameny who was at the dedicatory ceremonies and who was present on the bright Sunday morning in June when Father Dempsey became the first pastor of the historic church.

It is said and the writer was told that every Sunday several devoted people would walk from Redwood City to attend mass at Saint Denis church.

Martin built a modest home not far from the edifice. Every Sunday found the philanthropist in the front seat. He collected the offerings and was active in the work of the church.

Martin planted an orchard not far from his residence, several of the trees are still there bearing excellent fruit but only enjoyed by the cattle that browse on the tender shoots and succulent leaves of the trees.

Martin started an imposing dwelling, two stories high, adjacent to the modest old home but before it was finished he moved to another part of his vast domain, the Pulgas rancho, containing some 35,359 acres.

Martin in his munificence also gave the people a cemetery, the site of which was located several hundred yards from the church situated on a sloping hill, sheltered from the winds. Here the morning sun casts its first lines and here its last rays linger longest as it goes down behind the Santa Morena mountains. The cemetery was ideally located. Two tall cypress of mammoth size still stand in the middle of the sacred spot, perhaps planted by some fond mother who wanted their shadows to fall on the resting place of her dear one or may be tenderly set out by a devoted son, so that the grave of his beloved would be sheltered from the winter winds. The trees stand majestically and do perform this service for the dead.

A fence surrounds the God's Half Acre and is in fairly good preservation. A falling tree some time ago destroyed a hundred yards of it but this could be replaced at a nominal cost.

The head stones have crumbled and fallen. The inscriptions on them are in splendid state of preservation showing the mechanical skill of the artists in the by-gone days. According to the inscriptions the first burial in the cemetery was a young man named Edward Lynch, who was killed in a saw mill at Searsville, only a short way off, in 1856, and the last to be buried there was a child in 1874.

When Leland Stanford acquired this property in 1876 it was his request that the ancient cemetery and church should be preserved. After his death in 1892, his wishes were disobeyed and the fences were removed and the church wrecked. The silver candlesticks on the altar brought from Rome by Martin are now on the altar in the Church of the Nativity, Menlo Park. The old board fence around the graveyard has been replaced by a rail fence, which is partly down, permitting cattle to browse over the sacred place.

Martin after a long litigation over the Pulgas rancho lost the land. The late Sidney Mezes and Luis A. and Ramon Arguello secured title to it. Martin died in poverty and by a queer quirk of fate lies in the unknown and forgotten cemetery that was provided for the people during the days of his wealth and prosperity. His late resting place is unmarked. No marble shaft points heavenward to designate the spot where lies the bones or dust of this great man, a man who in strong manhood left his home in Missouri with a party of sturdy pioneers who crossed the trackless desert to build a home in the west. With him on the perilous trip were the Murphys who settled in Santa Clara county, obtaining large tracts of land from the Mexican government. Their decendants are all prominent in our neighboring county.

The Native Sons of the Golden West have dedicated their efforts toward preserving the land marks of the state. Here is an opportunity for the members and several parlors of the peninsula to unite and use their efforts in preserving the Saint Denis cemetery. It is a sacred spot, rich in history and should be preserved. A small amount of money would place it in splendid condition. This old land mark should not be allowed to crumble. It links the past with the present. By all means let it be preserved. Who can we turn to for the performance of this work but the Native Sons, whose pride in their state behooves them to keep in tact this holy and sacred land mark.

SAN MATEO SCIOTS BAND TO PLAY AT ENTERTAINMENT

As an added attraction to the entertainment to be given by the San Francisco Sciot's entertainment for inmates of the Stanford Convalescent Home for Children at Palo Alto Sunday, the San Mateo Pyramid of Sciots' band will have a part in the affair, it was announced this week.

Principals in the Sciot pageant to be presented at the Exposition auditorium in San Francisco next month have volunteered their services, also.

CONTRACT AWARDED

The contract for the construction of a new section of the coast-side highway was awarded Monday by the board of supervisors to the Western Paving Co. This section of road is to replace that destroyed by the waves last winter when more than a mile of the highway was washed during a storm. The purchase of two acres of land from Dante Dianda and John Patroni as a right of way for the new section of road was also authorized by the supervisors.

The bid of the Western Paving Co. was next to the lowest submitted. The lowest bid, that of Christianson & Biagini was withdrawn at the request of the bidders.

MAMMOTH NEW BRIDGE NOTABLE ACHIEVEMENT

Raising of Two 1100-Foot Spans Co-ordinated by a Special Telephone System

In the construction of the new Carquinez Bridge, recently opened for traffic across the Carquinez Straits between Crockett and Vallejo, Cal., the largest bridge of its type in the world, the telephone proved to be an indispensable tool and, in fact, if it had not been for the telephone the bridge could not possibly have been completed so soon.

This bridge is 4482 feet in length, contains two spans 1100 feet each, has a center tower of 150 feet, two anchor arms of 500 feet each, and 1132 feet of approach on the Crockett side. The only bridges that class with the Carquinez Bridge are the Firth of Forth, Scotland, and the Philadelphia and Camden. The Quebec Bridge is neither as large nor as long as the Carquinez.

To facilitate the construction of this gigantic structure the erecting company had a control system of its own with twelve telephone stations. It was necessary to get into communication with the erector crews on the north side, so a two pair cable was laid on the bottom of the Bay. A ship dragged an anchor through it and it was replaced with another, but the swift-running current soon wore it out on the rough rocks.

After the center tower of the bridge was erected, the engineers strung a messenger wire overhead and carried both the telephone and power cables on it. The chief engineer declares that the telephone was the deciding factor in the raising of the two great suspended spans, as they allowed each crew, each foreman, and the chief engineer in charge to be at all times in direct communication with each other, and, therefore, every move was known by all and everything worked in unison.

Facts About the Telephone

It takes more than 380,000 people to operate the country's telephones.

New York City has nearly three times as many telephones today as it had in 1914.

There are over sixty million miles of telephone wire in the United States.

There are over twenty thousand telephone central offices in the United States.

Michigan has ten times as many telephones per hundred people as are found in Europe.

In 1895 the United States had one telephone for every 342 people. Now we have one telephone for every seven people.

Beloit, Wisconsin, has as many telephones as the whole country of Greece, although Greece has 250 times as many people as the City of Beloit.

In proportion to population, Seattle has over three times as many telephones as The Hague, Holland, the capital city of Queen Wilhelmina's realm.

WHEN THE ENGINE STALLS

If the engine stalls in traffic, do not pull out the choker until the starter has been tried, advises the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. If the choker is used too soon the engine may flood, and you will be unable to decide whether the engine originally stalled through choking or starving.

WHY THE ENGINE OVERHEATS

The following conditions will cause your engine to overheat, according to the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Driving too fast in low or intermediate speeds; shortage of oil, or oil that has been used too long in the crankcase; or deposit of dirt, lime, or foreign matters on walls of water jacket or radiator.

C. C. MEMBERS HEAR APPEAL FOR ATHLETICS

Raymon Dimmick, football coach of the Sequoia Union High School, was the principal speaker at the Monday noon luncheon of the Redwood City chamber of commerce. Dimmick, who came to this school this year from Raymond, Washington, told the members of the chamber of commerce that only one member of last year's team was on the team this year, and two subs from last year. The remainder of the team is composed of raw material. It is, therefore, he stated, unlikely that Sequoia will shine at football. If, however, the team learns how to put up a good fight in spite of the handicap, Dimmick said, he would feel satisfied with the results. He asked the co-operation of the public in the school events and urged that the men of the town give the boys encouragement in the sport.

Frank Griffin, basketball coach, also addressed the meeting in regard to school athletics and the place they hold in the school curriculum. A. C. Argo, principal of the high school, was chairman of the meeting.

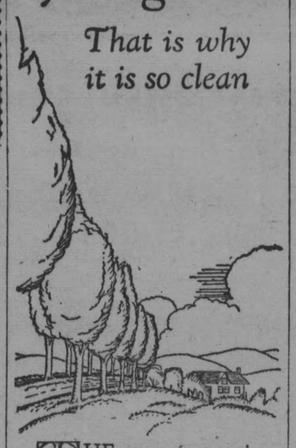
The clean fuel

for the home

Every bit of Gas is "scrubbed" before you get it

That is why it is so clean



THE gas you use in your home for cooking, water heating and house heating is "scrubbed"—every bit of it—before it goes through pipes into your home.

In the scrubbing process the gas passes through a series of large tanks. It is washed with water and purified. The lampblack, tar and sulphur are scoured out. Only pure, washed gas passes into the network of mains.

That is why gas is such a clean fuel.

And it's all fuel. No waste — no soot — no work to use it. It instantly burns with intense heat from the moment you strike a match until you turn off the tap. It's always ready for use.

Because gas is so clean and convenient, a gas range, gas water heater or gas-fired furnace saves your time and effort.

SAN MATEO COUNTY BOOTH WINS THIRTY EIGHT PRIZES

A total of thirty-eight prizes was awarded to exhibits of county products at the San Mateo county booth at the state fair last week. Of this number 17 were first prizes, 2 were sweepstakes and 19 were seconds. The booth was planned and prepared by Horticultural Commissioner A. W. Tate, and was as representative of the whole county as was possible. The display consisted of a large figurative map of the county showing points of interest while opposite each point a large photograph was mounted showing scenes from that particular location. In front of the map the crates and plates of fruit and vegetables were arranged while in the center of the booth was a table display of some of the county's finest flowers.

The first prize in blackberries was awarded to Mrs. G. Richards of East Palo Alto, Mrs. E. T. Morinan of the same district received a first prize for raspberries and a 2nd prize for canned raspberries. Mrs. D. E. Crosby and Mrs. L. Follett received second prizes for canned strawberries and canned corn respectively; and Mrs. F. C. Nickerson received a first prize for raspberry jelley and a second prize for pickled cucumbers.

M. A. Harris, Mrs. G. H. Roos, Mrs. E. H. Heller, C. R. Walter, H. Fleishaker and Sigmund Stearns, all of Atherton, each received a first prize on nectar ines. A. Schilling of Portola was awarded a first prize for medlars.

In the floral display M. Watanabe of Redwood City secured a first prize for chrysanthemums, E. W. McClellan of Burlingame for carnations, and McClellan and E. Enemoto of Redwood City for roses.

L. Garat of Colma was awarded a first prize for head lettuce and a second for cauliflower. Seven prizes were won on vegetable exhibits from the coastside of the county.

Supervisors Refuse to Grant Bridge Franchise

Franchise Denied to Candlestick Point Bridge Promoters

The supervisors on Monday refused to grant a franchise to F. W. Thompson, New York bridge builder, for the construction of a bridge across the bay from a point in this county near Candlestick Point and a point in Alameda county. The franchise asked for by Thompson was almost identical with that previously asked for by the Carey interests, which was refused by the board of supervisors several weeks ago.

The granting of a franchise to Thompson was opposed by members of the San Francisco board of supervisors and also by business interests of San Mateo and Burlingame who are backing the little Coyote Point bridge.

J. E. McCurdy, representing the latter interests appeared on Monday before the supervisors and asked that the franchise for the other bridges across the bay be withheld until the Coyote Point bridge and financed. The way is now clear for this enterprise, McCurdy stated, and a million dollars has already been subscribed. The permit from the war department was recently secured.

JUDGE J. R. WELCH TO HOLD HEARING

Redistricting Hearing Will Be Held Monday

The hearing before Judge J. R. Welch of Santa Clara on an alternative writ issued by Judge Welch to the supervisors of this county ordering that they redistrict the supervisorial divisions of the county or show cause why they had not done so will be held Tuesday in the court room of this county.

The writ was secured by Fredrick Peterson, former president of the Burlingame chamber of commerce, who is represented by Attorney John F. Davis, former city attorney of Burlingame. The securing of the writ against the board of supervisors is another step in the long fight being waged by residents of some sections of the county, particularly Burlingame to have the representation on the board of supervisors reapportioned according to population.

The board of supervisors will be represented at the hearing by District Attorney Franklin Swart, who will probably file a demurrer to the action.

COURTESY MAKES FOR SAFETY ON THE HIGHWAY

Safety on the highway can be greatly increased if motorists practice the fundamental rules of courtesy, says a bulletin from the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association. The courteous motorist will not monopolize the worn path over recently spread gravel, compelling all others to turn out into the loose gravel. Another example cited is that of cars meeting on a grade. The car going up the hill should have the right of way over the one descending it is pointed out. This is the rule in montain districts.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for the kindness and sympathy shown and for the many floral offerings sent in our recent bereavement.

'BIG THREE' CENTER ARE AT IT AGAIN

By Clem Whitaker

Special to the Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, September 15—The "cow counties" and the "big three" metropolitan centers are at it again on the legislative reapportionment issue.

Soon after adjournment of the 1927 Legislature, representatives of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Alameda counties filed referendum petitions with the secretary of state to hold up the farm bloc legislative redistricting bill and force its re-submission to the people.

And now Senator Frank S. of Stockton, acting for the California State Farm Bureau, has filed a suit in the Sacramento County Superior Court to restrain the secretary of state from accepting the city signatures on petitions against the act.

Senator Boggs, the author of the reapportionment measure, charges that thousanns of names on the referendum petitions are invalid, due to certain irregularities in filling in the dates after the signatures were secured.

The Boggs charges will be heard in court here next Monday. If the court upholds his contention, and in turn is upheld by the higher courts, the fight of the cities to forestall use of the farm bloc reapportionment system will be lost.

In the event of a court victory by the farm group, the legislature would be reapportioned at the next election on the so-called federal plan, the country districts securing control of the Senate on a territorial basis, while the cities retained control in the Assembly on a population basis.

More than a score of smaller counties would actually gain additional representation in the legislature under the farm bloc program, the act requiring that no county shall have more than one senator and no senator shall represent more than three counties.

Alameda county would lose three senators, San Francisco six, Los Angeles seven, and Santa Clara one. Santa Clara as an agricultural county, would gain in legislative strength, however, through the general strengthening of the farm bloc. Santa Clara's legislative delegation supported the Boggs bill.

The general effect of the Boggs measure, which was approved by the people on the ballot at the last general election, would be to assure a balance of power between cities and the rural districts in the legislature. Neither side would have the power to be arrogant, but each side would have sufficient strength to press its legitimate demands with a fair chance of success.

CIVIL WAR DEFENDERS MADE BRAVE SIGHT

At the outbreak of the World war Judge Buck by virtue of his office of Superior Judge of San Mateo county automatically became chairman of the County Council of Defense, which council was charged with the duties of forming a military outfit in each community of the county for home defense.

In Redwood City, Charles G. Lambert, as an old military man, was instructed with this duty by Judge Buck and within three days from the day of the request being made, a company of 75 men, the maximum number allowed by law, was formed under the following officers:

Charles G. Lambert, captain.
Walter S. Baker, first lieutenant.
W. J. Graef, second lieutenant who resigned and his place being taken by E. R. Kennedy.

This company was called the 30th Company of Home Kuards of California and afterwards changed to the 30th Company California Military Reserve.

They continued from that time and until after the Armistice was signed, to meet regularly every week.

Uniforms were provided partly by public subscription and partly through the board of supervisors, and arms were issued through the authorities at Camp Fremont.

The company at Redwood City was the only company that responded to the call of Judge Buck and detailed records of the company and its doings is now a matter of record in the County Library in the court house in Redwood City.

This organization was liable not only for home defense but were liable to be called to the border of Mexico at any time.

It was during the great civil war that San Mateo county first received national repute. Although we were not directly represented in that memorial struggle, still we are reminded by events which occured at that time that we were a loyal people, and that if it were absolutely necessary we were ready to march in the thickest of the battle and fight, bleed and die for the union.

The Jefferson Cavalry was organized in this town on the evening of December 26, 1863, at a meeting held in the court house. It was proposed to call the company Jefferson Rifles, but the idea of forming a cavalry company prevailed, hence the name by which the organization was afterwards known. Meetings and drills were held monthly at whatever place might be designated by the commanding officer, by the regular meeting place in this town was at the court house, and drills were held on the commons.

Omar Doyle is in possesion of the only records now to be found of the proceedings of the Jefferson Cavelry is the book containing the constitution and by-laws and roll of the company in which appears the following preamble:

Believing that our country's best safeguard consists of the ability of its citizens to protect their homes and firesides from the assault of both foreign and domestic foes, the undersigned do form themselves into a volunteer cavalry company, to be called the Jefferson Cavalry, and do bind themselves to observe the following constitution and by-laws:

Then follows several pages containing the constitution and by-laws, and the following oath to which is subscribed the names of the officers of the company.

"I do solemnly swear to support, protect and defend to the best of my ability the constitution of the government of the United States of America, and the State of California against all enemies either domestic or foreign."

Officers

T. . Bartlett, captain; J. O. Shaw, Sr., second lieutenant; G. W. Fox, first sergeant; W. Callagaham, third sergeant; C. H. Tilton, first corporal; J. McCarthy, third corporal; E. R. Woodhead, buglar; T. W. Lathrop, first lieutenant; J. Murray, Jr., second lieutenant; A. Saunders, second sergeant; A. W. Hunt, fourth sergt., D. Jenkins, second corporal; J. Donald, Jr., fourth corporal; James Hilton, farrier.

Shortly after organization, the company was furnished with sabers and uniform by the state, the members providing their own horses. In a few months they were so proficient in all military movements as to be considered one of the best drilled companies in the state.

When the company held its first public drill, a ludicrous accident occurred which caused the first and ony retreat. Captain Bartlett gave the order in stentorian tones, "Draw—Sabers." Out came the sords simultaneously with a clatter and a clash, but the horses which had not yet become accustomed to such movement sbecame frightened, and before their riders had time to get their arms in position and again assume control of their terrified nags, their was a general stampede, and in less time than it takes to tell it, the entire company was scattered to the four winds. It is said that some of the horses did not stop in their race until they had reached home.

At one time it was feared that the rebels from Texas would make a raid through California. Extra precautions were taken to meet them and give them a warm reception should they take in San Mateo county on their march. Sentries were kept on duty night and day at the armory, who were to give the alarm, which consisted of ringing the court house bell, should the enemy present himself. One night the sentry who was on duty heard a noise in the court yard. His suspicions were at once aroused, and fearing that the dread moment had at last come, when Jefferson Cavelry must distinguish itself before the world, he seized the rope and rang the bell loudly. In a short time the court house was full of excited soldiers, who were quickly formed into line, and with sabers drawn marched to the rear of the building and charged on the enemy, who was seen lurking among the trees. Imagine their surprise and chagrin when they found thot the intruder was none other than Joe Vioget's mule, who had broken into the court yard and was quietly browsing in the tall grass. The sentry that gave alaram afterwards became one of the county's attorneys. He has since been mustered out of service and now sleeps with many others of his old companions in arms in Union cemetery.

At one time the company attended a picnic at Menlo Park, near the San Francisquito creek. The event was in honor of the completion of the railroad to that point. The members were always in a jolly mood and anxious for a lark. At this picnic was a fruit stand kept by an old Mexican, and an attack upon him by the cavalry was made. The charge was a brilliant one. It is not now known whether it was led by Pete Doyle, or the regular commanding officer. At any rate the unhappy Mexican fled in terror and left his possession to the mercy of the soldiers. The watermelons were slashed into a thousand pieces and the stand was completely wrecked. A purse was afterwards made up among the boys and presented to the fruit man which reimbursed him handsomely for his contribution to the day's enjoyment.

On the Fourth of July 1864, the Jefferson Cavalry participated in the celebration in San Francisco. During the stay in the city they were entertained by the Black Hussars. Everywhere they went they were praised for their splendid marching and excellent soldierly bearing. The Gazette in mentioning their departure from town on the morning of the 3rd of July, says: "As the company marched past our office on their way to San Francisco with their brightly polished sabers glistening in the morning light, we thought that they never looked so well worthy of the deserved appellation of the 'Pride of San Mateo.'" The eagle-eyed reporter of the Gazette evidenty neglected to mention one laughable incident which ocurred on that morning, which was longfresh in the minds of all who rode in that parade. On its way out of town, when the company reached the bridge on A street, Joe Keith's horse came to a sudden halt much to the annoyance to its rider and the company in general. He could not be induced to budge an inch, and the result was that Keith had to procure another horse. Some of the happenings of that day would hardly bear publishing, although all are tigned with a spice of humor which characterized the young men of those times.

On the march home another laughable incident occured. Lieutenant John Murray cast nis eye backward along the line of march when he discovered Privte Larry O'Neill ocupying a position in his saddle contrary to the rules laid down in military tactics, while from between his teeth protruded a short black clay pipe, from which clouds of smoke emitted. This infraction of military dicipline was too much for the lieutenant, and spurring his horse up to the offending soldier he shouted: "Private O'Neill — —; Dress-up!" and with one fell swoop of his evenging sword Larry and his pipe were parted. It is needless to observe that the offending soldier at once assumed a strictly military attitude, which he maintained throughout the rest of the march.

The foregoing is only a brief history of that famous organization. At the close of the war its duties ended; the company disbanded; the accouterments were returned to the state and the members once more settled down to civilian life.

Of those whose names are there enrolled none remain to tell of those thrilling times of long ago; all have answered the final call. They are resting in the dreamless sleep with the silent majority.

Ravenswood Bonds Are Ordered Sold

The board of supervisors on Monday ordered the sale of 18 bonds of the Ravenswood school district to Dean Witter & Co. of San Francisco. The original issue was for 20 bonds of $1000 each, but owing to a legal technicality it was found that only 18 of the bonds could be sold at the present time. The bid of Dean Witter & Co. was the highest received at the time the bonds were advertised, but owing to the change in the amount of the issue, it was thought advisable to re-advertise on the basis of 18 bonds. Monday was the date set for the opening of the bids.

James B. Threkeld of the Dean Witter Company appeared before the board, and requested that since his firm had submitted the highest bid on the original issue that the 18 bonds be sold to them at the same rate. The board then consented to this and ordered the clerk to return the new bids unopened.

New Road From Pescadero Under Way

Special to the Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, September 15 Boosters of California Redwood Park, one of the most beautiful tracts brought under central control by the new government coordinated park development program, are already campaigning for improvements in Big Basin under the proposed $6,000,000 bond issue.

A swimming pool with a heating plant to take the chill from the mountain water, a dance pavilion near the Bowl, paved tennis courts, and a new hotel building with a spacious dining room are among the improvements asked.

The Fire Escape road leading out of Big Basin to a connection with the Gazos Creek road is well underway. About one mile of the road has been constructed and approximately 2 1-2 miles remain to be built. San Mateo county plans to spend $10,000 in improving the Gazos Creek road to the connection with the Coast highway at Pescadero.

Although steel and rubber largely enter into the manufacture of automobiles, there is more wood used in this industry than ever was required in the old horse-drawn vehicle business.

Hi-Y Club Holds First Meeting

The Sequoia Hi-Y held its first meeting of the season at the First Methodist church on Monday evening. Much enthusiasm was expressed by the members over the prospects for the work of this organization this year. Arthur Lampkin, the president, reported the findings of the executive committee at the meeting at Doxsee's cabin. An interesting program of work and social times was outlined and adopted. Don Bogie and R. Dimmick, advisors to the club, spoke briefly on the opportunities for service on the part of Hi-Y fellows. R. Dimmick was advisor for the Hi-Y club at Raymond, Washington, for several years. Leland Penna gave several selections on the piano accordion.

It was decided to follow the same plan as last year for meeting a month in each church.

Plans were laid for the next meeting to which all high school boys are invited. The meetings are held each Monday at 6:15 P. M. with a supper at a nominal price. During the month of September the club will meet in the Methodist church.

Watch the School Child's Health; Early Symptoms

By J. C. Irons, M. D.
Dartmoor, W. Va.

Member Gorgas Memorial

Now that schools are beginning and the time for expected changes in temperature is at hand, it is most important that parents and teachers be watchful for earliest symptoms of defects or diseases so prevalent in the young. That we may aid in directing attention to a few of the most prevalent defects that occur in children, we will briefly call attention to them and what may be easily detected as the early symptoms.

First, defects of vision. The child may be noticed to be rubbing the eye; on examination some redness may be seen; nervousness is evident; constant change of position; child may have frequent and persistant frontal headaches; complaint of a blurring of the letters; and an inability to fix the eye on the printed page for any length of time. These symptoms clearly indicate some defect in vision which should be corrected prompt ly to avoid other and more serious conditions. Turn the child over to the family physician for advice or see an able oculist and have applied proper corrective measures.

Second, diseased tonsils. Statistics prove that a very large per cent of the young have diseased tonsils, which, if not corrected by treatment or removed, cause a multitude of ailments. Diseases of other glands, blood disorders, rheumatic diseases and often other serious conditions may be found and should be attended to promptly.

The first evidence of a diseased condition of these organs are frequent complaint of sore throat, huskiness of voice, labored or mouth breathing when asleep, enlargement of the tonsils, etc. When these symptoms appear, consult your family physician promptly, that early remedies may be applied to prevent other serious afflictions.

Third, diseased teeth. Often these little-regarded addendas are neglected, not appreciating the bad effect of decayed teeth or suppurating gums upon the general health. These foci of possible infection are so liable to cause serious or painful ailments that they should have careful and constant attention.

In many sections, the school nurse is a most valued aid in detecting these defects and in advising as to the means of correcting these conditions.

Frequently children have been censured and punished for not preparing tasks efficiently when the real cause was the inability to study or acquire by reason of these defects. Give the boys and girls a fair chance in the race and usually they will make good.

For the failure of those responsible to give attention to these conditions and have proper relief, whether it be from ignorance or indifference, there should be some means to penalize and enforce relief measures.

Insects More Deadly Than Wild Beasts; The House Fly

By Franklin H. Martin, M. D.

Insects are more deadly than wild beasts, C. Wesley Edwards of Evanston, Illinois, points out in an interesting article concerning the common house fly. Mr. Edwards is an engineer and was in the field of service in the U. S. Army Signal Corps from 1913 to 1918 under the late Major-General William Crawford Gorgas, during which time he had extensive experience in the methods of eradicating mosquitoes and flies. He is enthusiastic about Doctor Gorgas and the continuation of his noble work by the Gorgas Memorial, and his writings concerning insects are authoritative. His article follows:

Civilization has eliminated from modern communities the scourge of wild beasts, which in past centuries were a deadly menace to humanity. But civilization is just beginning to realize that its own development has given added impetus to the much deadlier menace of insect life. And that this danger is a real one science gives ample proof, pointing out that if present tendencies continue unchecked, within a very few centuries insect life will dominate the globe, and the human race will be exterminated.

"Of all the insects that afflict us there are none more common, or more deadly, than the ordinary house flies. They are found all over the world. The meanest hovels are always swarming with them, and no mansion or castle can screen tightly enough to keep them out. They are found everywhere, although science has proved that they transmit many of our deadliest diseases. It would be far safer to keep a tiger cub or a pet rattlesnake in the nursery with the baby than to have the house flies now swarming there. The tiger might stay good natured all its life and a rattlesnake never bites except when provoked. But a fly distributes filth every time it alights, and disease germs thrive in filth.

"Ninety per cent of the diseases of childhood are disorders of the digestive tract. The house fly is most efficiently equipped to carry the germs causing such diseases, and its life history shows that it spends much of its time in places where germs are likely to be found.

"The strangest part of the whole thing is that the house fly is just as unnecessary as any other household vermin and even more easily eradicated. The only difference is that the house fly is usually bred outside the house. But the housewives of the nation should awaken to the fact that their home standards of cleanliness, if applied to community housekeeping, would absolutely wipe out the house fly scourge.

"Flies live upon filth and can breed only in filth. They are enormously prolific, as are most insects, and under favorable conditions will increase with appalling rapidity. Fortunately they are short-lived and if prevented from breeding will very quickly disappear. But screening and swatting the adult flies are only makeshifts. Prevention of breeding is the only effective method of control.

Mother Makes 'Em Best

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

I guess 'most anybuddy's cake
An' cookies ain't so hard t' take
When boys an' girls 're comin' in from play;
But when I'm lookin' fer a treat
That nothin' else could ever beat,
I'll pick my Mother's cookies any day!

My Gran'ma makes 'em awful good,
An' lots o' times I wish I could
Be at her house t' eat 'em while they're hot.
Sometimes a neighbor-lady, too,
Is lucky, an' brings us a few—
But, gosh, our fam'ly always needs a lot!

When Mother hasn't any more,
Sometimes she buys some at the store,
But every kind tastes jes' like all the rest.
You bet yer neck I like the cake
An' cookies other people bake;
But my own Mother always makes 'em best!

New Auto Laws

EXPLAINED BY AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION ATTORNEY

By George E. Sanford,
General Attorney California State Automobile Association

This is the sixth of a series of articles written by George E. Sanford, explaining the new provisions of the Vehicle Act.

Several new provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act provide additional safeguards against theft of cars or strengthen the possibility of recovery of stolen cars. The first of these provides for the centering of all theft reports in the State Division of Motor Vehicles in a manner similar to the centralization of accidents described last week.

By an addition to Section 55 of the Act it is provided that county sheriffs, chiefs of police or other peace officers shall report to the Division of Motor Vehicles th fact of a car having been stolen, in the event that such vehicle has not been recovered within one week from the time of theft.

Recovery of cars reported stolen shall also be immediately reported to the Division.

This will make it possible for the Division to have a complete record of stolen cars not immediately recovered against which all applications for registration or re-registration shall be checked.

The new law requires that no motor vehicle shall be transferred or registered until engine and serial numbers have first been compared with this stolen car record.

These changes will enable state and city authorities to exercise a greater measure of co-operation in the apprehension of thieves, and likewise to save innocent buyers from the hardship of purchasing stolen cars.

Three other changes have been made to provide a greater check on the traffic in stolen cars. Hereafter dealers are required to give notice of sale or transfer of used cars to the Division. Notice of new car sales only have been required heretofore. As a further check, public garages, including parking stations, are required to keep a record of cars stored longer than twelve hours and submit such record to the inspection of police. Garages must notify police of cars stored more than thirty days when the owner's name and address is unknown.

ICE

Only ICE does this!

The circulating air in an ice-cooled refrigerator picks up odors and impurities from your food and carries them to the ice chamber, where they are absorbed by the melting ice and carried off down the drain pipe.

STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in the open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his fiancee, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Garth meets Doctor Quarrier, geologist, and his sister Joan. Quarrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing McDonald." At Elkwan an Indian girl, Ninda, tuberculosis victim, whom Garth has befriended, is dying. Joan, trained war nurse, cares for Ninda, but the girl dies. Three of McDonald's party visit Elkwan seeking to buy gun shells. From them Garth learns of evil talk among the Indians concerning him and Ninda. With Etienne's help Garth wins the friendship of Saul Souci, "medicine man" of the Crees, and gets his promise to persuade the Crees, to take their furs to Elkwan instead of to McDonald. Garth is ambushed by Joe Mokoman, Ninda's reputed father. "Shot," Garth's airedale companion, saves him, and the Indian is taken, a prisoner, to Elkwan. Garth sends Mokoman to McDonald with a message of defiance, and the war is on. Garth hails with joy the freezing of the strait, which will enable Souci's followers to bring their furs to Elkwan without difficulty.

"Mokoman lies!" stormed the startled half-breed, but the germ of a suspicion of the old conjurer's loyalty quickened in his brain. "Are there camps at the head of the river in the barrens?" he asked, keen to catch the Ojibwa and old Saul, the traitor, at their work.

"Yes, you will see them before the light dies, and there are more on the north fork."

"Remember," cautioned the puzzled half-breed, as he turned to his dogs, "the boat at Seal cove is full of demons—bewitched. Those who go will never look again with joy on their wives and children." And with this parting shot, the shrewd Savanne called "Ho'-jo'!" and joined his chief.

As they again took the river trail, from here on ice-hard from constant use by the teams of the hunters, Etienne gave Guthrie the gist of his talk.

"Old Saul—at the schooner? It's only a lie of that Ojibwa," objected Garth, unable to reconcile the old man's simplicity and directness with this deceit. "A lie to weaken the effect of Saul's coming to the island to work for us."

"Mebbe so, but I t'ink somet'ing ver' strange here. Dees camp ees near de shore—why has Saul not come here?"

"They may have lied. He may have been here," suggested Garth. Etienne shook his head. "No, he nevaire cum here or day talk more 'bout heem. He ees medicine man and de squaw would talk mooch eef he cum."

"Well, let's see what the people above here say. Then we can compare the stories and judge better what to believe, and what our next move is. If Saul has turned yellow—we're surely done."

Facing the man riding behind him, Etienne nodded. "Eef Saul work for de schooner, he weel tak' de Elkwan Cree wid heem." Then the lean features of the half-breed tightened. His small eyes closed to slits, as he viciously cracked his whip. "But dat ol' shaman weel mak' hees las' medicine," he rasped.

The hate in the face of the dog-driver was so intense that Garth objected: "You can't shoot him up for that, you know. It would only react on Marie and the children, and on me."

Etienne's mouth curled in an inscrutable smile. "No one but Saul Souci weel know who meet heem on de trail."

"I guess you'd be capable of ambushing him for this, but we're not dead yet. Let's see what the hunters at the head of the river say."

In the scrub rimming the shores of the first lake from which the tundra undulated to the skyline, the men in quest of Saul Souci found the tipis of the hunters. It was a camp of three families and smoke from the supper fires already lifted above the spruce when the arrival of the dog-team raised a general alarm from the huskies fastened in the scrub.

"Kequay! kequay!" called Etienne, and a shock of black hair was thrust through a door flap, as a curious Cree emerged to meet the strangers.

"He's not from Elkwan," dropped Guthrie disappointed, as the Indian approached to shake hands.

"'Allo, Achille!" And Etienne warmly gripped the hand of the Indian, who then greeted Garth. "Achille Laguerre from Kapiskau, and me, ol' fr'en'," announced the patently pleased head man to his chief.

We'll learn something now, thought the factor, as they drove the dogs into the spruce, fed them their frozen whitefish, and chained them separately to trees. As the December sun was long down and their tent lashed under the toboggan cover, Etienne accepted the hospitality of Laguerre's smoke-filled tipi. There, with eyes weeping from the unaccustomed smoke, Garth ate boiled rabbit and lake-trout from the copper kettle hung above the fire, from which the wife and numerous children of Achille gorged in common. But the appetite sharpened by the ride up the valley in the keen air was impervious to the informality of Cree table manners and Garth's tin cup went back to the steaming stew and the tea pail with the regularity of his smoke-tanned host and hostess, until his belt warned of surfeit.

He passed to each of the Crees a twist of company nigger-head, and pipe smoke swiftly added to the opaqueness of the tipi air. Then Etienne, who had avoided the subject of Souci and the schooner in his gossip with the curious and perplexed Laguerre, opened with:

"You know de strait ees froze?"

Achille, who spoke English, gravely nodded. "You cum to de island. Eet mus' be so."

"Oou, mon ami. We are here. Eet ees enough. Why, Achille Laguerre," he went on, probing the small, half-shut eyes of the half-breed, "do M'sieu' Guthrie and I, Etienne Savanne, cross de ice to mak' talk wid you?" Etienne paused and blew a cloud of smoke along the stem of his pipe, which his teeth gripped.

Achille grinned widely. "You cum to mak' fight for de fox," he chuckled.

"You are moz' smart man, ma fr'en,' but you mak' beeg meestake. We cum to tak' de fox back to Elkwan wid de peopl' for beeg tam at la bonne annee, New Year."

"Ah-hah!"

"You go to Kapiskau, Achille?"

The Indian slowly shook his head. "I go to de beeg boat. He pay beeg price for pelt."

Garth leaned eagerly forward to hear the counter stroke which Etienne was waiting to launch.

"Ah-hah!" For a space, the cracking of a spruce knot was the only sound in the tipi. Then Savanne began: "You not ver' smart man, Achille. You leesen to dat 'Jibwa Wabeno, Mokoman. Ah-hah, you not so smart man. . . . We tak' heem to dis island wid old Souci. You know why?" Etienne paused dramatically to relight his pipe. "So McDonal' put de devil into heem."

Nervously twisting her hands, the squaw of Achille stared at the speaker from awe-filled eyes. The stolid features of the half-breed reflected curiosity, doubt—but no fear.

"I put dat Mokoman undair de ice up de Elkwan—he mak' troubl' for us; but we weesh to have devil put een heem by McDonal' Ha! Ha!"

"Mokoman was' here," dryly countered Achille.

"Was Souci wid heem?" snapped Etienne, as a dog a bone, and Garth's pulse quickened as he waited for the reply.

"No, Souci ees ovair de hill, nord."

"W'en you say Saul was at de schooner?"

Again Guthrie leaned to catch Achille's return.

The half-breed waited, spat into the fire, then said: "You hear dat?"

Etienne nodded. Now he would learn the truth from a friend who, in the old days of their comradeship, had never lied; but, in his extremity, he himself launched brazenly into outrageous fabrication. "We sen' old Saul to de schooner to talk wid de devil of McDonal'."

The self-possession of Achille fell from him like a leaf from a tree. "You sen' heem dere?" he demanded excitedly.

Etienne was relieved. He had pierced the armor of his friend—was at last making progress.

Amazed and delighted at the resource of his head man and wondering where his astounding imagination would further lead him, Garth watched the changing expression on the dark features of Achille.

"Ah-hah!" casually assented Etienne. "We know dis McDonal' Ha! Ha! mak' bad medicine an' de pore Injun who go to hees boat nevaire love dere familee any more, but travel far away and leave dem to starve—"

"Ahuah! ahuah!" wailed the terrified squaw, and launched in Cree a delirious outburst of entreaty and appeal.

Achille's attempts to sooth her hysterics succeeded only in increasing the lamentations of the superstitious woman. At length she calmed to a low mouning, which was joined by the wailing of the awakened children.

Under cover of the dusk of the tipi, sinewy fingers gripped Guthrie's stocking-inged foot. With the skill of a sorcerer, Etienne had planted the seeds of superstitious terror in the tipi of his friend. The work of Saul and Mokoman was rapidly being undone by the shrewd Savanne. Then voices outside announced the coming of the hunters from the neighboring tipis. Crowding through the doorflap of the snow-banked tent, three Indians from the Kapiskau river entered and sat down.

The fire was freshened and briefly Achille explained the situation which had aroused the fears of his wife. With the faces of stoics the men smoked, while the story of Etienne was repeated, but when they heard that Mokoman had been brought to the island with Saul because of the witchcraft of McDonald, they, too, lost their gravity and their calm. For that this mutilated stranger should be the intimate and crony of the spirits of darkness was not beyond the credulity of the impressionable Cree. And did not Achille vouch for this Savanne, his old comrade, from Elkwan? It was true, they argued, the big man with the unspeakable face offered high prices for fox pelts, but if he were in league with devils—as he might be with that leer, which never died—of what use would be the trade goods he bartered to those who left the ship mad with the medicine. And now that the women knew, there would be no peace. Still, Souci would know, and tell them. They would go to Souci, the shaman, who, camped with his sons over the big barrens to the north. So it was left; and two gratified men from Elkwan rolled into their blankets in the tipi of Achille Laguerre

CHAPTER VIII

The stars pierced the blue dusk forerunner of the stinging dawn when a dog-team pulled out of the black spruce and dwarf tamarack rimming the headwater ponds of the Ptarmigan and followed a trap-line trail up into the tundra which billowed away to the wind-whipped backbone of the island. On they hurried, the team and the wide-ranging Shot, for somewhere in the valleys of the Rabbit or the Canoe, Mokoman and the renegade Souci were seducing the hunters from Elkwan. And Christmas was but six days away—Christmas, with teams from the three winds drifting down the valley into Elkwan for the trade and the feast at New Year's.

There was little time to be lost if they were to win the hunters of Akimiski and lead them across the strait. So the five dogs took the uphill work at a trot, while the men trailed the sled.

In the middle of the morning the men left the trap-line and breaking trail ahead of the dogs, slowly climbed the last rise of the barrens. In places the lack of snow on the brittle heath made the work of the dogs heart-breaking. While the flat toboggan slid over the frozen tundra, the huskies, seeking a footing, constantly broke through. Shortly, their bleeding feet forced a stop while moccasins were lashed to their legs. But at last, panting dogs and men stood on the roof of the island.

Through the glasses Garth made out the white delta of the Elkwan, and his thoughts drifted to two women who had once shared his quarters there—two women who did not shrink at scars.

But it was bitter cold on the open ridge and the dog-team turned down, seeking the valley of the Rabbit, masked by intervening hills. Over the tundra the snowshoes packed the trail for the sliding toboggan, while the dogs ran, where the hard snow on the heath gave them footing, and slaved, where they broke through the low bushes of the brushed barren when they threw their weight into their collars.

As the day advanced, the frost strengthened. A veil of haze slowly curtained the low-swinging sun, and the dog-team hurried on, for the night would fall in early afternoon, and to be caught on the high tundra by a wind meant swift freezing.

Still before them the endless hill lifted to the horizon with no indication of the break of a low valley where timber would give them shelter and a cooking fire. At noon it was evident that Etienne was worried. Never before had Garth seen his head man use the whip on his dogs as he used it that day; never in their journeys had the fur-lined hood, circled with ice and rime, turned so often while the slit-like eyes of the half-breed consulted the horizon.

"Beeg blow comin'. Mooch snow, she fall soon."

"It can't be far now," said Garth. "We've surely made the twenty miles. The Rabbit must head over that hill."

"Eef we don't get off dees high countree before de win' blow, we nevaire get off," was the quiet rejoinder.

"It's colder, already." And Garth took in the belt of his parka.

"De dog weel not travel mooch more. Dere feet are cut to pieces on dis frozen bush."

On up the next ascent the limping dogs, with breath trailing behind like ribbons of smoke, followed the trail breakers. Gaining the backbone of the ridge, the men stood with startled eyes looking north. Instead of the wide basin of the Rabbit headwaters with its scrub-fringed lakes, they looked across a treeless barren.

The grave eyes of Etienne met Garth's puzzled look.

"Those Indians lied."

"No," objected the half-breed. "We travel ver' slow. Eeet ees ovair dere." And he pointed to the far ridge.

"It will be dark when we hit it."

"One hour more light and de win' rise," muttered Savanne as he patted Castor, who lay at his feet, his steaming red tongue hanging from a mouth hung with ice. "You ver' tired, Castor? You mak dat ridge?"

The powerful leader got to his sore feet and whined as if he understood, but the listless team lay sprawled on the trail.

"It's come," announced Garth, as a curtain of snow drifted in from the northeast.

"We go! Up, mes enfants! Allons! Marche, Castor!"

An hour later, five dogs sheathed in white, plodding slowly behind two ghostlike shapes, reached the rim of the basin of the Rabbit headwaters. Dimly below them, through the pall of snow and gathering dusk, the men traced the scrub edging the lakes with shadow. As they stood in the rising wind as the dogs rested, night shut down, wiping from their eyes the goal they sought, as a sponge wipes clean a slate.

"I've got the compass direction, north, northwest," said Garth.

Etienne shook his snow-crusted hood. "Keep de win' on right cheek. So long cheek froze, we head right for de timber." He turned to the dogs, white as the snow they lay on. "Marche, Castor, mon brave!" And snapping his whip, he tugged at the harnesses until the reluctant brutes got to their feet.

Both Wondered

It is natural for many of us to stand off and wonder how our neighbor can live as he does. Because he has different standards and doesn't enjoy our kind of games, we wonder how he can possibly have any fun in life.

There is a delightful story which Jonas Lie, the artist, told. The artist was at the seashore working at a sketch, when he noticed an old fisherman who seemed to have no luck, but just constantly fished all day long, rebaiting his hook at intervals.

When the day ended, the fisherman said to the painter: "Hi, neighbor, been watchin' yer! How has yer the patience to stand and paint all day?" —Exchange.

COATS MATCH BLANKET OR RUG; SMALL TYPES IN FALL MILLINERY

IT WOULD seem as if the mode is taking more and more to the idea of moving in "sets." For our handbags and hats and belts and shoes to be matched—there's no longer a thrill in that. In fact, matching sets like these have grown to be a habit, not a novelty.

That one's coat be matched to the color of one's car, or for it to be fashioned of the identical plaid of one's motor or steamer rug—well that is a different story. Anyway, fashion's latest wrinkle is to accompany the plaid coat worn by the traveler at sea or the motorist, with a blanket or rug to match.

It is really not necessary to be motoring or crossing the ocean in order to acquire one of these luxurious coats, for they are to be had without the rug. The real object of the picture is to convey the fact of the employment of these handsome woolen steamer blankets for the making of the better grade sports coats such as are gracing this autumn's style parade.

These patrician sports coats declare the fact of quality in not only the superb cloakings of which they are made, but equally so in the elegance of the furs which trim them. Some of the favorite furs used are pointed lynx, natural vicuna, genuine wolf and fox, some fitch, and there is a special vogue for beaver. It develops also, this season, that pointed furs are considered outstanding.

Very swagger coats are also made of tweed in novelty patternings, rough cheviot and camel's hair cloaking, often unfurred, but perhaps having a smart scarf-collar. It is the proper thing to wear with these coats minus fur a large flower of the cloth of which the coat is made.

Novelty coats show unique trimming touches of calfskin or snakeskin.

Paris modistes are still loyal to the little cling-tight shapes—and so are we in America. The skullcaps and toques in the autumn millinery collections are indulging in all sorts of whimsical notions which add to their allurement. Most of the new snug hats exploit the earlap effect, if not on both sides, at least on one.

There is every evidence of a wide use of ornaments, and feather fancies will no doubt capture the mode before the season is far advanced. Even now hackle pads and little wings are used unstintedly—quills also.

The newer felts have a lustrous, satiny finish, with long nap. These are very aptly called soleil felts. There are as many velvet as felt hats among early models. Quite a few models are of velvet and felt in compose.

A representative group of snug-fitting hats is presented in the illustration as follows:

The first hat is black felt with a tiny excuse of a brim done in satin. A gold galloon applique emphasizes an earlap trim, which repeats at the opposite side.

A skullcap with a flare which bridges the top of the hat is illustrated to the right at the top. It, too, is of felt in the new cocoa shade. It stresses the fashionable buckle-trim.

Black stitched suede felt is smartly designed in a unique shape shown to the left, below. It displays a handsome ornament such as are in such active use this season.

To the right, below, the shape is felt with cut-out leaves, revealing a velvet background. Rhinestone ornaments add a decided touch of smartness.

An ingenius handling of felt with velvet is featured in the little cling-tight hat shown last. The felt is slashed just large enough to let a tab of the same slip through.

Tiny cloches which cling to the head like a cap are made entirely of shirred velvet. Sometimes an enormous chou of the velvet is placed at one side. Then again the silhouette is not disturbed by any trimming, a sparkling ornament being the only adornment.

FALL MILLINERY TYPES ALL SMALL

Milliners are also producing very fascinating effects by using velvet and felt together. Sometimes velvet in the form of drapes and choux trim the felt helmet or toque, or vice versa. A very effective working of the two together is achieved by fancifully designing the belt in cutout by patterning, which makes a fine showing against the velvet background.

Pyrography, done with a heated needle as on leather, is a new development which is producing wondrous effects on felt hats. Often the felt takes on, under this process, the aspect of tooled leather.

Fagotting Again

Very charming dresses for small girls are made entirely by hand. They are of white handkerchief linen combined with narrow strips of blue that are fagotted on at the neck and on the sleeve bands.

Feathers as Trimming

Small ornaments of flat, uncut ostrich feathers placed over the ears on tight-fitting hats of felt and velvet promise to be among the most important winter millinery trimmings.

Change in Skirts

For some time there has been noticeable a fullness in skirts. This has been gathered in front or the side fronts. Now we see designers gathering this fullness in the back, where it forms a distinctly bustlelike effect.

Amusing Sport Hats

Very gay indeed are little hats of colored felt, with designs of embroidery upon one side. The designs, by a well-known artist, show active young tennis players in action.

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By PAUL H. SEYMOUR
Author of "Highlights on Auction Bridge"

(Copyright, by Hoyle, Jr.)

Article One.

Introductory

ALTHOUGH the game of Auction Bridge and its predecessors, Bridge and Whist, have been played for many years, a wonderful increase in its popularity is just at the present time sweeping over the country. Thousands of people who a few years ago refused to learn the game because it was too much like work are today giving up the simpler games of Euchre and Five Hundred and seeking instruction in Auction.

Its devotees are fascinated by it principally because there is something solid and substantial about it and because it does require sound and careful thought. A recreation is something which diverts a person's mind and activity from its customary channels, and it has been found that this does not mean inactivity, and that it need not be a frivolous, worthless activity.

Even those whose daily work is largely mental find that they gain rest and refreshment in a totally different kind of mental exercise such as they find in Auction. While some card games are agreeable for a social hour and serve satisfactorily as time killers, anyone who spends leisure hours in playing and studying Auction has the added feeling that he has been doing something well worth while. He has exercised and thus strengthened his observation, memory and reasoning faculties. As most people need to use these faculties in their daily work, they find that their study of Auction fits them better for their duties in office, factory or drawing room.

There is also a steadily increasing demand among the players for a better understanding of the game. Many who have played it in a haphazard way simply as a time killer are coming to appreciate its worth and are devoting some time to its real study.

No matter how well a person plays, there always is room for improvement because the possibilities of the game are such that they can never be fully mastered. Among the many thousands of players in the world, only about 2 per cent play well enough to be called experts, and for the other 98 per cent and for those who have never played at all, these articles have been prepared. There will be 36 articles in the series, and while the first two deal with fundamentals of the game with which all players are familiar and while the aim has been to use such simple language that all may understand them, still the treatment of the subject will be so systematic and thorough that following them should greatly improve the game of every player.

Their value will depend not upon how many rules are given or how many isolated cases are explained, but upon the clearness and simplicity of the statements and the comprehensiveness with which the system will cover the countless possibilities arising in the bidding and playing of the game.

In order to become proficient in any game, two things are needed—learning the rules so thoroughly that they may be instantly put into practice, and then learning when to break these rules. In teaching Auction one should not use the words "always" or "never" because there is no rule which should not be broken at times. Any person who always plays according to rule will be a "wooden" player and never can hope to rise to the level of the expert.

To break rules wisely, however, one must know them thoroughly, and to do this will require study and real work upon the part of the student. If anything is worth doing at all it is worth doing well. Therefore it is urged that all who wish to profit by these articles should make up their minds to do their share of the work.

In order to learn rules of a game thoroughly, studying them is not sufficient. One must actually play at the same time and, therefore, it is recommended that students studying these articles do so in groups of four. In this way the illustrations can be placed on the table and actually played. This not only will make them easier to understand, but will help materially in remembering them.

After studying each article it would be well to play a regular game and discuss the points which come up to illustrate the teaching.

As the series progress, more and more points will be covered, and the only way to master such teaching is to review the previous articles frequently. Each article may possibly make it easier to understand a preceding one, so that every time an article is reviewed some statement in it is sure to shine with a new light and give the student a meaning which he had formerly missed.

Therefore, those who wish to get the most out of these articles would do well to save them and reread frequently from the beginning.

Poultry Victims of Floods

Human beings, generally, are the chief recipients of aid from the Red Cross in times of disaster, but in the recent floods on the Mississippi, animals were rescued and cared for in great numbers, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. At Opelousas, St. Landry parish, La., the largest temporary hen yard in the United States was constructed to feed 100,000 chickens driven from their roosts by the flood waters. The feathered refugees were fed by the Red Cross, as were 30,000 hogs, 10,000 mules and some 30,000 head of cattle. One of the problems arising from the work was to find the owners.

GABBY HARTNETT IS IMPROVING

Becomes as Good as Rated Three Years Ago.

"Gabby Hartnett is now the catcher that people thought he was three years ago," is the way one Chicago scribe explains the almost daily presence of that energetic young man in the lineup of the Cubs. He was overestimated in 1924, and he is being underestimated in 1927.

"Blabbermouth" Hartnett has supplanted Mique Gonzales as McCarthy's first-string receiver. The picturesque Cuban had the call throughout most of last season. The question before the house is whether athletic old age affected Mique's Castilian maneuvers around the home plate or whether the switch is due to the subtle improvement in Hartnett's technique. Chicago's opinion is that Hartnett has improved, which is natural enough.

Gabby Hartnett.

If you listen to ball players, Hartnett was a vastly overrated catcher three years ago when he was generally considered the best in the league. He was certainly the most universally popular receiver around with his vast "color," his peppery antics behind the plate, and the habit he borrowed from Mickey O'Neil—that of whipping the ball back to the pitcher in a manner calculated to tear the hands off the perspiring moundsman. He was a dangerous "all-or-nothing" hitter and has usually ranked well up among the home-run sluggers of the league.

But opposing ball players saw flaws in Hartnett's play. He had a great arm, but he delighted in showing it off. "Get a catcher throwing and you've got him licked." That is one big league motto. And Hartnett often threw for the pure joy of throwing at the slightest provocation, or none at all. His judgment in handling pitchers also was subject to frequent criticism.

Bob O'Farrell was "Gabby's" running mate in Hartnett's first year as a Cub regular, and the fact that such an excellent catcher as O'Farrell was sidetracked so frequently for the fiery Hartnett was a chronic surprise to other clubs. When O'Farrell was traded to the Cardinals for Mique Gonzales, Hartnett remained the first-string receiver until McCarthy took over the Chicago reins last year. Joe divided the work almost equally between the flaming youth and the staid old-timer.

This year Hartnett is in there almost every day. Experience has steadied him to a large extent. He has learned some of the more intricate points of catching science; in short, he has been getting wise.

Chicago thinks he is just as good a catcher right now as the canny old Cuban, and his superior hitting gives him the call.

Took Three Sacrifices to Advance Base Runner

Frank Shulte, George Stovall, Gabby Street and Bobby Wallace were holding an old timers' reunion. It was Stovall's turn to take the floor and this is what he offered: Years ago, when managing in the brush, Stovall's club had a runner on first, none out and was sorely in need of a tally. The next hitter, a typical rookie, was sent to the plate with instructions to sacrifice.

Stovall ground his teeth when he saw the youngster take a healthy wallop at the first pitch and shatter the ozone. When the same thing occurred on the next delivery, Stovall was dumfounded, but before he had recovered, the rookie had taken his final mighty cut and was en route to the bench.

Stovall's exact oratory isn't related, but we are assured that the young man heard some choice and torrid verbosity. When the wrath of the skipper had somewhat subsided, the innocent recruit offered his alibi.

"Gee, didn't I take three healthy sacrifices when I was up there? If you wanted me to bunt, why didn't you say so?"

THE UNLOVED WIFE

(©, by D. J. Walsh.)

MARGARET BINNER walked slowly home. She had been to the post office for the mail and had stepped into one or two stores to do some necessary shopping. She had met several persons whom she liked and knew and had paused for a word or two. But now she was going home, and home did not mean as much to her as it formerly had, because Margaret was drinking the bitterest cup which fate raises to the lips of wifehood; she had begun to suspect that her husband no longer loved her as he had once done. She had tried to blind her eyes to all the evidence in the case, but at last it had been made all too plain; she could no longer conceal the fact from herself and she suspected her friends could see as plainly as she that she was fast becoming an unloved wife. A great pity for herself welled up in her heart and tears smarted her eyes as the shame of it came to her. What should she do; would it be right to go on living with John when she was certain that he was perfectly indifferent to her?

Upon reaching home Margaret entered the house—she hardly thought of it as home now—and throwing aside her hat sank down upon the big davenport. She must try to think it all out—to plan, if possible, some course of action that would bring some sort of peace to her mind.

She and John had been married almost two years. He had been an ideal lover and husband up to within a few weeks, when suddenly he had seemed to change. He no longer proposed going to places and had no little surprise for her when he came home at night from the office. He always kissed her, it is true, when he came in and still seemed to enjoy the food she prepared for him, but he did not praise it as often as he had. He did not seem quite as gay either when he came in. And after the evening meal he would sink into a big easy chair, adjust the floor lamp at an angle to suit him and bury himself either in a newspaper or book. Now, that was another thing that gave proof that John did not care for her. He knew well enough that she hated to have him move that floor lamp. At first he had laughingly given in when she protested and called her his fussy little housekeeper, but now, without a word, he would calmly move the lamp and say nothing about it. Now, Margaret did not mind staying at home occasionally, but lately night after night John settled himself for the evening, and if she protested or suggested going out he would say he would much rather stay at home, and, finally, one night he told her if she found him dull to run along alone.

"Run along alone! What wife," thought Margaret bitterly, "if she had a proper pride, would air the fact to her friends that her husband no longer found joy in her society?" And then a horrible thought struck her. "Of course that was it. John was either ashamed to be seen with her or there was another woman!" The thought fairly brought her to her feet. She began pacing the long living room and then her eyes chanced to fall upon the mail she had brought from the post office. When the postmaster had handed it to her he had bundled it in a newspaper. At first Margaret had been too busy and too agitated even to think of mail, and when she came home she had thrown it upon the davenport at her side. In springing up just now she had scattered the mail all over the rug and now right there in plain view lay a big, creamy envelope. "Ah!" she thought. She grabbed up the letter with the feeling that at last "she" had written. She tore open the envelope with shaking fingers without glancing at the address. She was startled when she read:

"Dearest: I will arrive on the 2:40 this afternoon. I am taking this opportunity of spending a few days near you. I am on my way East and cannot go through Spencer without seeing you. Now, honey"—"honey, indeed!" thought Margaret—"don't let me spoil any of your plans, but just let me have every moment of your precious time you can manage to steal away from your—" Here the page turned, but the little red specks were floating so thick and fast before her eyes that Margaret could not go on for a moment and then she read—"steal away from your home. I know you are as much in love as ever, one with your constant nature could not change, but I must see and know it for myself. So good-by until 2:40 this afternoon. With love, hugs and kisses. From your cousin FANNY."

Cousin Fanny! And then Margaret picked up the discarded envelope and saw that it was directed to her and it was without doubt from her very own frivolous cousin Fanny. She had not seen Cousin Fanny since she and John were married and this was the first time she had heard from her in months and months. The relief and disappointment combined turned her almost faint. Well, she would just have to put aside her problem and do what she could to make Cousin Fanny enjoy the few days she would be in the house. It would never do for Margaret to let this romantic creature know that John no longer loved her. Perish the thought. She must put on a brave front.

At 2:30 Margaret was at the station with her little roadster to meet Cousin Fanny. She wore one of her prettiest dresses and she had so carefully powdered her nose and bathed her eyes made red by recent tears that Cousin Fanny, when she impulsively kissed her, said she had never seen Margaret looking happier or prettier. Poor Margaret was thankful that she had thus far been able to conceal her breaking heart. But how was she going to keep on smiling—"

That night when John came in, big, brusque, and found Cousin Fanny he was simply overjoyed.

"I'm so glad you've come, Fan," he said in his hearty way. "I am afraid it's been a little dull for Margaret here lately, but I've had so blamed much to do at the office that when I get home all I could think of was to sink into a chair and read. I tell you home is a great place to be in. It's like heaven to me to get home, have a good meal and be able to sit and smoke and think. I'll say, if every fellow had a wife like Margaret here the movies and theaters would soon have to go out of business. She makes me lazy, too, by feeding me. And, say, by the time I've eaten one of her good dinners—and believe me they taste good after that quick lunch I patronize at noon—I have no ambition to move. Some little cook I've got here, Fan, as you'll soon see. What have you got to eat tonight, Puss?" asked John as he put his arm about his wife and gave her a good hug. "I'm as hungry as a bear. Come on, Fan, let's see," and he led the way to the dining room.

Never in all her life had Margaret eaten such a good meal, never had she been so happy in all her life. She felt as if John had been restored to her, and when after dinner he seized the floor lamp and placed it behind his favorite chair and settled himself with his newspaper and pipe for a quiet evening she never even noticed that he had ruffled up a corner of the rug in his haste to get settled comfortably. Margaret suggested going out, but Cousin Fanny pleaded that she was tired and would rather stay in.

"Say, girls, tomorrow afternoon I'll lay off and we'll all do the town. In the evening we'll take in a good show, too, if you say so," and then he relapsed into silence.

But for Margaret there was no silence, for within her heart was the singing as of a million birds.

April Fool's Day

Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable suggests that as March 25 used to be New Year day, April 1 was its octave when its festivities culminated and ended. "It may be a relic of the Roman 'Cerealia' held at the beginning of April. The tale is that Proserpina was sporting in the Elysian meadows and had just filled her lap with daffodils, when Pluto carried her off to the lower world. Her mother, Ceres, heard the echo of her screams, and went in search of 'the voice'; but her search was a fool's errand; it was hunting the gowk, or looking for the echo of a scream."

Valuable Meteor

The biggest lump of rock which exists on earth lies nearly 1,000 feet below the surface, near Holbrooke, in Arizona. It is a meteor, which fell from the skies and buried itself. In doing so it scooped out a valley three-quarters of a mile long and 600 feet deep. A company has bored down to it and found that it is a mass of meteoric iron, mixed with nickel and other metals. Its value is computed at $12,500,000.

Famous City of the Past

Nineveh was the capital of the ancient empire of Assyria, one of the most ancient nations in history. The city was destroyed in the year 606 B. C. The modern city of Mosul stands on the site of the suburbs of Nineveh, and Mosul has been assigned to Mesopotamia, better known as Iraq, a sovereign state established by the peace settlement of 1919.

Indians Had Popcorn

The Indians of the pre-Columbian period did have a variety of corn similar to our popcorn. In the Southwest this was called "little corn." It is doubtful, however, that the aborigines used such corn for popping purposes, but it is probable that our popcorn was developed from this Indian variety.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Many Factors Unite to Shape Literature

A literature is the spiritual interpretation of an age. It is the expression and illumination of the sorrows, the conflicts, the burdens and the aspirations of one's own time. True literature shows us the eternal laws operating under common and fleeting forms of life around us. The literature is a pathfinder.

A great literature is never an accident; it is as truly an evolution as is a tree. The literature of a nation is the outcome of its whole life. Its growth is determined by four mighty forces: Race, or heredity; environment, or physical and social conditions; epoch, or the spirit of the age; personality, or that which is fundamental in man's nature.

Each man is born with all the momentum of his race within him. We look big because we stand upon the shoulders of all the preceding generations. We are the fruit of the past and the seed of the future. Next, we come to environment, or the impress of nature and society upon literature.

A great writer must have some message for the world—a great truth that is even higher than his own era. But the form which that message shall take depends chiefly upon his epoch. He cannot write with the large power of Shakespeare's time, because the language is not ready for him. Each age has its spirit and its possibilities.

But in the building of a literature there is a final, strange force beyond race environment, and epoch; it is the ineffaceable element of personality in man. What is called genius is the highest, keenest manifestation of personality. Genius remakes the society which evolves it. It not only expresses but intensifies the national type, and the eternal, that underlies all types. Genius becomes the golden key to the locked-up ideal of the multitude. Great literature is genius speaking its interpretation of the acts and aspirations of an age—of the meaning and the mystery of life.—Edwin Markham in the Smoker's Companion.

This is the centenary year of the reaping machine, the early appearance of which, obviating the necessity of large numbers of scythemen, was bitterly resented by agricultural laborers.

Stowaways Guard Monkey

Two young stowaways on the steamer The Lambs, in the port of Baltimore from Manila, with a cargo of sugar, made themselves so useful as caretakers of four monkeys that the captain had aboard that they've been signed on for a Far East trip and have decided to follow the sea. The boys boarded the ship at the Canal Zone. They are Claude and John W. Dawson, both of St. Louis. Only once on the voyage did their charges get away and then one of them entered an officer's cabin and devoured two cakes of soap.

A Real Triumph Which Has Revolutionized the Grocery Business

An achievement as stupendous in its own way as anything accomplished in late years has been the growth of the Piggly Wiggly System in every locality. There are now thirty-five Piggly Wiggly Stores in San Francisco and San Mateo Counties to serve you.

This success has been a real tribute to PIGGLY WIGGLY Service—the privilege of self-selection of standard brands from attractive shelves in scrupulously clean stores with courteous attendants. This service includes, too, a saving of time and money. You may take as much or as little time as you wish to make your purchase. There is an inevitable saving of money, because the simplicity of the system itself makes the merchandising cheaper and you reap the benefit of this saving, as well as the specially low prices which come as result of enormous quantity buying.

Piggly Wiggly is glad to be able to join the good people of California in welcoming you to our cities. May your short stay be a pleasant one for you. We know it will be an inspiration to all of us!

ALL PIGGLY WIGGLY STORES AND MEAT MARKETS WILL BE CLOSED FRIDAY FROM 2 TO 4 P. M. FOR THE LINDBERGH PARADE.
